THE LEAD AND ZINC MARKET

A new company was organized Tuesday at Crittenden Springs by Mr. Geo. M. Morris, a local capitalist and capitalist from Henderson, Mo. The new company, proprietor of Crittenden Springs Hotel, and others. The capital stock will be $100,000, divided into 100,000 shares of $1.00 each, and the purpose of the corporation is to develop mineral lands in this county. The company will probably be incorporated under the laws of Arizona. The list of incorporators, so far as obtained, are: A. Dean, John W. Wilson, W. T. Terry, George M. Morris, F. E. Robertson and T. A. Conway. The incorporators already have some very good properties, which will be turned over to the new company, on which they will probably begin work as soon as the necessary preliminaries have been arranged. It has not been announced who will superintend the work.

It has just leaked out that Capt. Hase has leased and optioned the Marion mines from Mr. Rosa Owens. The mines were reopened recently and some work done, when they closed down for a short time on account of church services being held near the mines. It is said that work will be resumed on Monday, the 14th inst., and development work will be carried on rapidly during the term of option. The terms of the option have not been made public.

At the Bell mines, across the river, some very rich zinc ore has been struck. In fact, it grades so high it will be sent direct to the smelter without the necessity of dressing it. The Bell property has been sold to the owners of the Pullman property, according to current reports. Mr. Hase has been very successful in the past in the development of these properties. He has been very successful in the past in the development of these properties. He has been very successful in the past in the development of these properties.

The Pittsburgh Mining Company, it is reported, are now down about 180 feet with their shaft and are going down to the 250 foot level, before they again drift to their vein of ore. At 180 feet they developed such a fine vein of lead and spar they are anxious to continue sinking to a much greater depth and block out a large body of ore. The fluor spar taken from this mine was largely No. 1 grade and the lead was also very high percentage. This company is to be congratulated upon their fine prospects, as well as upon their determination to do considerable development work, instead of trying to market their ore rapidly at the expense of more favorable working conditions in the future, consequent upon poor development work.

R. E. Cooper, of Hopkinsville, president of the Marion Mineral Company, it appears, after a continued absence of several weeks, has resumed his weekly visits to Marion to view the progress of the company's operations. His company owns and operates some of the best mines in the district.

Joplin, Mo., August 6. The highest price paid for zinc ore was $6 in advance of the highest price paid the preceding week, and was received for one bin of ore on the ground. This bin was sold for $56, and the next highest price known to have been paid was $55.50. There was no assay basis, the bidding being done to get the ore at any price. Very little ore was sold up to Thursday morning anywhere in the district and very little ore was sold since Thursday evening. It was one very strenuous day for the buyers, one of the oldest in the district remarking that he could not remember, even with prices at $60 per ton, any one day in which so much business was crowded. Most of the purchasing agents had in previous weeks, along with the enterprising buyers, and there was a wide variety of ore. A few of the agents had anticipated the rush for ore, and one is reported to have had one load on each of fifteen cars at Prosperity and Cartersville and before another one arrived with his teams ready to load, only to find the cars all loaded. At least one bin of lead was sold at $61.50 per ton and it is reported that this price was paid for several other bins in Webb City and Cartersville. Grades of 80 per cent lead sold generally at $60 per ton.

The Marion Zinc Company is sinking at the Biley mine as fast as men and machinery can do the work. They are down about 180 feet, it is reported, and will continue down to 250 feet, when they will drift to their vein of ore, already developed at previous levels. The same company is also sinking at the Bell mines, being down about 90 feet, and will continue to about 150 feet, when they will drift to their vein. Mr. C. S. Knight is certainly doing some efficient work since coming to the district. It is reported that new machinery will be added to their already spacious and efficient plant, making it, perhaps, the best in the district.

THE HISTORY OF A ZINC MINE

Good Reading for Mine Brokers, Practical Mine Owners and Company Promoters.

A Paducah lawyer a year or so ago was in Crittenden county, Ky., on business and in walking across a tract of land fell over zinc carbonate sticking out of the ground which resulted in his hunting up the owner and securing a 40 year lease. On his return to Paducah he formed a company of merchants and professional men to develop it. The first amount subscribed was $5000.00; from the start it has been mineral. In sinking two shafts, one 63 feet deep and one 45 feet deep, 400 tons of ore has been taken out and now lies on the dump—carbonate of zinc, lead and jack. Then came a difference of opinion about how to run it, and they found that mining was a business in itself.

Now to settle the partnership this great find is for sale at a price which about makes them even and in no way the real value of this bonanza—with 220 acres selected mineral rights (in fee.)

This great property has been investigated by the U. S. Geol. Geological Survey and special mention is made of it in their printed report.

Being a stockholder it is put in my hands for sale.

All questions cheerfully answered.

Panoramic Yellowstone Park.

The Northern Pacific road, which is now being built, will give a valuable picture of the park. This work of art is 48 inches long by 24 inches wide, done in fifteen colors. It shows, absolutely the topography of the Park, the location of the hotels, geyser basins, canons, roads, lakes, mountains, and all features of the Park. It gives, as nothing else can, a connected idea of the region and is a valuable picture and map combined. Framed, it is ornamental as well as useful, and is specially suited to the school, class room and library.

This Panoramic Picture will be sent to any address by A. M. Cleland, General Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minn., upon receipt of 25 cents. Orders may be sent direct to A. M. Cleland or through any of the General or District Passenger Agents of the Northern Pacific in the larger cities, or through the local agents in Northern Pacific territory.

Educational Column

W. HUGH WATSON, Editor.

The young teacher's mind is rife with numberless aims she means to carry out in the first school term. But there are far more aims in the mind than will find way to the school, and it is right—right for the teacher, three right for pupils that many of these aims die in embryo. "Not failure, but low aim is crime." The common sense way is the best way, yet, even though high down theories endeavor to force recognition. If the purpose is there, will not the plans be developed? This thought was most forcibly brought out in the Institute. Contact with others in work will help greatly in proving our aims. The defects as well as the good things about them will be brought out more clearly. Wisely refrain from adopting the other fellow's methods, but prudently adopt them if of oneself there is no originality.

There are many times when the teacher is forced to halt between two opinions. A moment or two, then, for reflection.

If the old adage, "There is no excellence without great labor," was heeded more, there would be more excellence in all lines.

"Push in Education," by W. Gracey Montgomery, in this issue of the column, is a splendid article and has the right sort of ring. Ring again, Bro. Montgomery.

Don't wait for someone else to write for the educational column. Be sure and not be left out of the twenty-six week's run. Besides, your duty as a teacher does not end with the teaching of young writers and orators. So if you are an excellent conveyor of the ideas.

Write. Every teacher in the county to write an article for the educational column.

Push in Education.

W. GRACEY MONTGOMERY.

General Sherman once wrote to General Grant: "Things are in a shape to push." Grant replied: "Push things." That applies very nicely in the school room. A teacher would succeed in his profession if he had vim, energy, and did what you may be sure push things that which makes things go. There is no place in common school curriculum for the dead, slovenly teacher. He must be awake, alive and thoroughly competent to bring into action that inward spirit which manifests itself in doing.

There must be inculcated into his very being the fire of ambition, which seeks to hoist the flag of educational advancement over the van of the surging tide of poor educational facilities, until he can raise the standard, fall into the life line of public duty and plant his symbol of progress upon the parapet of time.

When Xerxes, at the pass of Thermopylae, summoned Leonidas and his brave Spartan army to an unconditional surrender, and after being assured that the darts of the Persians were sufficiently numerous to darken the sun, the brave Leonidas replied: "Then we will fight in the shade."

Teacher friends, you will find a class of people in almost every sphere of life who care for nothing more than mere existence. They are in the profession only for the meager sake of livelihood, and have no motives what ever, beyond self. Such are in a greater part the bane of the public schools of today; and their continual pessimistic howling only causes the darkened cloud of selfish motives to drift its ragged edges over the golden disc of educational advancement and intellectual growth, until now it remains for the live teachers to rally to the call for better schools, expunge this mediocre way of teaching and prepare to fight the malcontents in the "shade."

Then we must be wary and on the alert—wide-awake and doing. For this inactivity in so-called educational work can only be ostracized and eradicated by your going to the post of duty, as it were, with a well developed resoluteness of purpose and a determination of instilling and infusing into the life and being of the child the desires and need of an active life.

You may call me a fanatic, enthusiast or whatever you may, but permit me to say that I believe in push and pushing in the truest American sense of the meaning, and especially so in the school room.

And, in conclusion, allow me to say that a great many of us will teach in houses which have bad and improper means of heating and ventilation, and very often poor play grounds, but that does not deter us from exerting upon our daily associates that influence which has a tendency to move things along. And when we hearken to the call of more activity, force and energy, and lay aside those stagnant impulses that link us to the profession for the greater part of the mutual benefits derived therefrom; ay, if we will only put on the robes of purity and excellence, and awaken ourselves to the fullest sense of duty, then it will not be a great while until the flickering light of the thoughtless, incongruous teacher will be extinguished by the breath of public sentiment. No longer shall the despicable influence of his actions deflect its shade over the paths of the coming generation.

Some Facts About Washington.

Starr, Ky., August 5, 1905.

Dear Editor:—

If you will allow me a small space in your valuable paper I shall try and write a few lines in regard to Washington. I spent four months in the Yakima Valley in the little town of Toppenish and I think I know of a few facts that have been told by H. C. Hill, or in other words, Bulger Hill. If Mr. Hill has told the truth about the place, it has met with a great change since I left there August 27, 1901. Now, I shall try and tell you of a few things that he did not show me. He said the country was level, and if that country is level I have never seen any hills, and he said cabbage grew so large that they were 100 pounds to the head, and he said beets were 18 inches through and I know that is all false, and he said the Irish potato grew 23 inches long and I know that is not true, so just to be plain and make a long story short, it is but little that he told that is true.

I also notice that one lady in writing to The Record last week is having great sympathy for Mr. Hill and says it is so much expense to him. It looks to me that a man could stand a little expense when he gets big money out of the government and larger money out of the bankers he catches when he comes to Kentucky, and I also think if he was the man that he should be, and had so much money to show, he would come back here and pay some of the people for their tobacco that he bought. Respectfully, D. M. F.

WATER WORKS FOR MARION

The Opportunity and the Man Here.

HALF OF STOCK PLEDGED

Our Recent Disaster, Caused by Holocaust, Is Well to Be Remembered and

MOVEMENT SHOULD BE SUPPORTED

That Marion is to have a system of water works commensurate with its size and commercial importance, and that its handsome new structures, when completed, will be insured some means of protection against a repetition of the destruction caused by flames on March 28, 1905, is at present a dream only, but may soon assume some of the phases of reality.

Mr. George M. Morris, a capitalist and promoter, from Henderson, Ky., who is here for the purpose of organizing a mining company, stated to a representative of the Record that he could and would organize a water works company also, if a franchise will be granted such company under conditions which would be an incentive for his people to take hold of the proposition.

It was also stated by Mr. Morris that his associates and himself were interested in systems of water works installed elsewhere, and that one man had offered to subscribe for a controlling interest in a plant which would be installed here, if the franchise is purchased.

LOVING GIVES BAIL

IN SUM OF $10,000

The Examining Trial Finished on Saturday Evening.

Paducah, Ky., Aug. 7.—Acting Justice D. A. Cross Saturday night held H. H. Loving in the sum of $10,000 for killing Herbert A. Rose at the Paducah Jail Tuesday morning. A night session of court was held at which arguments were heard.

When the commonwealth concluded its evidence about 7 p. m. Saturday, Attorney Hal Corbett for the defense, moved that the warrant be dismissed. Judge Cross overruled the motion and the defendant, H. H. Loving, then took the stand for about an hour and for the first time made a public statement in regard to the shooting.

The version of the defendant differs materially in some respects from the evidence of all the witnesses. He states that after the differences arose between Rose and him, that began with the alleged misappropriation of company funds by Rose, and after threats had been made against his life, Rose having been deposed as president of the Kentucky Mill & Lumber Company to which position Loving was elected July 29, that he carried a pistol himself and that he knew Rose to do likewise. He said that Rose had a pistol on his person when shot and he swears that Rose put his hand on his hip pocket and declared he would kill the defendant, when he, the defendant, fired the fatal shot.

Loving gave bond about 11:40 p. m., and was free which he had practically been ever since the shooting. His sureties are: Harry Meyers, Dr. J. T. Redlick, Ed Guthrie, W. C. O'Bryen, Cecil Reed and A. G. Owsley.

F. H. LAYH, Fredonia, Ky.

It is a good idea to keep the new book on the shelf for a while to see how it works out.

Richard J. Morris, Dentist.

His legs were crossed and one elbow thrown carelessly over the back of his chair. We all sat looking at him anxiously. In a moment he began chewing hard on his quid of tobacco. Uncle Eb pushed the cuspidor a bit nearer. The doctor expectorated freely and resumed his attitude of reflection. The clock ticked faintly; the patient sighed; our anxiety increased.

Uncle Eb spoke to father in a low tone, whereupon the doctor turned suddenly, with a little grunt of inquiry, and, seeing he was not addressed, sank again into thoughtful repose. I had begun to fear the worst when suddenly the hand of the doctor swept the bald peak of benevolence at the top of his head. Then a smile began to spread over his face. It was as if some fourth or fifth of thought had begun to tickle him. In a moment his head was nodding with laughter that brought a great sense of relief to all of us. In a slow, deliberate tone he began to speak.

"I was over 't'at Tupper's father day," said he. "That was sitting with me in the shanty. P'rry soon a young chap came in with a scythe and asked if he might use the grindstone. He was a new hired man from some where near. He didn't know 'at, an' 'at didn't know him. So 'at o' course had 't' crack one o' his jokes.

"May I use yer grindstone?" said the young feller.

"P'rry," said 'at. "I'm only the hired man here. Go an' ask M'r Tupper."

"The o' lady had overheard him, an' so she says 't' the young feller: 'Yes, ye can use the grindstone. The hired man out there'll turn it fer ye.'

"'at see he was trapped, an' so he went out under the plum tree, where the stun was, an' begun 't' turn. The scythe was dull an' the young feller bore on harder 't' wuz riled decent fer a long time. 'at began 't' git very sober lookin'.

"'Ain't ye 'bout done,' said he.

"'P'rry 't'ight,' said the young feller, bearin' down a little harder all the time.

"'at made the stun go faster. P'rry soon he asked ag'in, 'Ain't ye done yet?'

"'P'rry 't'ight,' says the other, feelin' o' the edge.

"'I'm done,' said 'at, an' he let go o' the handle. 'I dunno 'bout the scythe, but I'm a good deal sharper 'n I wuz.'

"You're the hired man here, ain't ye?" said the young feller.

"No, I ain't," said 'at. "I rather own up 't' I'm a liar than turn that stun another minute."

As soon as he was fairly started with this story the strain of the situation was relieved. We were all laughing as much at his deliberate way of narration as at the story itself.

Suddenly he turned to Elizabeth Brower and said very solemnly, "Will you bring me some water in a glass?"

Then he opened his chest of medicine, made some powders and told us how to give them.

"In a few days I would take him into the big woods for awhile," he said. "See how it agrees with him."

Then he gathered up his things, and mother went with him to the gig.

Humor was one of the specialties of Mr. Migsby. He was always a poor man, but had a way of lumping his bills, at about so much in settlement and probably never kept books. A side of pork paid for many a long journey.

He came to his death riding over the hills one bitter day not long after the time of which I write to reach a patient.

The hayling over, we made ready for our trip into the woods. Uncle Eb and Tip Taylor, who knew the forest, and myself were to go with Gerald to Blueberry lake. We loaded our wagon with provisions one evening and made ready to be off at the break of day.

I remember how hopefully we started that morning with Elizabeth Brower and Hope waiting their handkerchiefs on the porch and David near them whistling. They had told us what to do and what not to do over and over again. I sat with Gerald on chickens that were spread over a thick mat of hay. The morning air was sweet with the odor of new hay and the music of the bobolink. Uncle Eb and Tip Taylor were sitting in the wagon, as we came to the hills.

When we entered the shade of the big forest Uncle Eb got out his rifle and loaded it. He sat a long time whistling and looking eagerly for game to right and left. He was still a boy, one could see evidence of age only in his white hair and lined and wrinkled brow. He retained the little tufts in front of his ears, and lately had grown a silver crescent of them and silky hair that curled his throat under a bare chin. Young as I was, I had no terror of the forest, a healthy child. At noon we halted beside a brook and unbuttoned our coats. Then we caught some fish, built a fire and cooked them and showed our tea. At sunset we halted at Turkey pond looking along its rocky margin under purple tamaracs for deer. There was a great shadow here in the deep of the woods, and Tip Taylor's ax, while he peeled the bark for our camp, seemed to fill the whistling noise with echoes. It was after dark when the shanty was covered and we lay in its fragrant now of balsam and hemlock. The great logs that we had rolled in front of our stumps were set aside and shortly supper was cooking.

Gerald had staid the journey well. Uncle Eb and I stayed in while Tip and I got our jack ready and went off in quest of a dugout. He said that the wood had one hole in a thicket on the south side of Turkey. We found it after an hour's tramp near by. It needed a little repairing, but we soon made it water worthy and then took our seats, he in the stern, with the paddle, and I in the bow with the gun. Slowly and silently we glided a way through the starry shadows. It was like the hushed and myrtle movement of a dream. We seemed to be above the deeps of heaven, the stars below us. The sundown of the forest in the still water looked like the wall of some mighty castle with towers and battlements and myriads of windows lighted for a fête.

Once the groan of a night hawk fell out of the upper air with a sound like that of a stone striking in water. I thought little of the deer Tip was after. His only aim in life was the one he got with a gun barrel. I had forgotten all but the beauty of the scene. Suddenly Tip roused me by laying his hand to the gunwale and gently shaking the slug out. In the dark distance ahead of us I could hear the faint tinkle of dripping water. Then I knew a deer was feeding not far away and that the water was filling from his muzzle. When I opened my jack we were close upon him. His eyes gleamed. I shot high above the deer, that went splashing ashore before I had pulled my trigger. After the roar of the gun had got away in the distant timber Tip mentioned a place abhorred of all men, turned and paddled for the landing.

"Could he killed 'im with a club," said he, snickering. "Guess he must 'a' looked purty tall, didn't he?"

"Why?" I asked.

"'Cos ye aimed into the sky," said he. "Maybe ye thought he was a bird."

"My hand trembled a little," said I. "Mind me of Bill Barber," he said in a half whisper as he worked his paddle, chuckling with amusement.

"How's that?" I asked.

"'Nuthin' else but the thing he shoots at," said he. "Terrible bad shot. Kills a cow every time he goes huntin'."

Uncle Eb was stirring the fire when we came whispering into camp, and Gerald lay asleep under the blankets.

"Willie couldn't hit the broadside of a barn," said Tip. "He don't take to it nat'ral."

"Killin' an' book learnin' don't often go together," said Uncle Eb.

I turned to the side of Gerald, and Uncle Eb went off with Tip for another trip in the dugout. The night was chilly, but the fire flooded our shanty with its warm glow. What with the light and the houghs under us and the strangeness of the black forest, we got little sleep. I heard the gun roar late in the night, and when I woke again Uncle Eb and Tip Taylor were standing over the fire in the chilly gray of the morning. A dead deer hung on the limb of a tree near by. They began dressing it, while Gerald and I went to the spring for water, peeled potatoes and got the pots boiling. After a hearty breakfast we packed up and were soon on the road again, reaching Blueberry lake before noon. There we hired a boat of the lonely keeper of the reservoir, found an abandoned camp with an excellent bark shanty and made ourselves at home.

That evening in camp was one to be remembered. Al Thomas, the guide who tended the reservoir, came over and sat beside our fire until bedtime. He had spent years in the wilderness, going out for nothing less important than an annual spree at Christmas time. He eyed us over each in turn, as if he thought us all very rare and interesting.

"Many bears here?" Uncle Eb inquired.

"More plenty 'n human bein's," he answered, putting lazily at his pipe with a dead calm in his voice and manner that I have never seen equaled except in a tropic sea.

"See 'em often?" I asked.

He cupped his pipe, striking it on his palm until the bowl rang, without answering. Then he blew into the stem with great violence.

"Three or four 'n a summer mornin'," he said at length.

"Ever get 'em?" Uncle Eb asked.

He whipped a coal out of the ashes then and lifted it in his fingers to the level of his pipe.

"Never real sassy," he said between vigorous puffs. "One stole a ham off my piazza las' summer. Al fished brought 't' in fer me one day small good too. I kept 'em up 't' thinkin'."

The books of the Home Law School Series are designed especially for young men. Never before has a complete education in one of the noblest and most practical of the sciences been brought within the reach of every young man. Lincoln was a Lawyer, Home Trained, who had great faith in the powers of the young man, and the following extract from one of his letters shows how he urged them to "push forward."

"The possession and use of a set of books will not only enable but stimulate every young man to 'push forward' and bring out the best that is in him, attaining a higher and more honored station in life than he could hope to attain without them."

The Lawyer of to-day is the right hand to every great business undertaking. In politics and statesmanship the Lawyer stands pre-eminent. He is credited with judgment and discretion, and his advice controls in all important matters. Every commercial enterprise of any importance has its salaried legal adviser. FREDERICK J. DRAKE & CO., Legal Department, CHICAGO, ILL.

Tip had everything ready for our journey home. Each day Gerald had grown paler and thinner. As we wrapped him in a shawl and tenderly helped him into the wagon I read his doom in his face. We saw so much of that kind of thing in our stern climate we knew what it meant. Our fun was over. We sat in silence, speeding down the long hills in the fading light of the afternoon. Those few solemn hours in which I heard only the wagon's rumble and the sweet call of the whippoorwill—waves of music on a sea of silence—started me in a way of thought which has led me high and low these many years and still invites me. The day was near its end when we got to the first big clearing. From the top of a high hill we could see above the far forest the red rim of the setting sun, big with winding from the skin of day, that was now flying off the tree tops in the west.

We stopped to feed the horses and to take a bite of jerked venison, wrapped ourselves warmer, for it was now dusk and chilly, and went on again. The road went mostly downhill going out of the woods and we could make good time. It was near midnight when we drove in at our gate. There was a light in the sitting room, and Uncle Eb and I went in with Gerald at once. Elizabeth Brower knelt at the feet of her son, unbuttoned his coat and took off his muffer. Then she put her arms about his neck, while neither spoke nor uttered any sound. Both mother and son felt and understood and were silent. The ancient law of God that reads asunder and makes havoc of our plans bore heavy on them in that moment. I have no doubt, but neither murmured. Uncle Eb began to pump vigorously at the cistern, while David fussed with the fire. We were all quaking inwardly, but neither betrayed a sign of it. It is a way the Puritan has of suffering. His emotions are like the deep undercurrents of the sea.

"I've ever hear o' the wild man 'at comes round 'n these woods," he asked.

"Never did," said Uncle Eb.

"I've seen 'im more times 'n ye could shake a stick at," said Ab, crossing his legs comfortably and spitting into the fire. "Kind o' think he's the same man folks tells us down 'n Paradise valley there 'at goes round 'n the clearin' after bedtime."

"The night man?" I exclaimed.

"Guess there's what they call 'im," said Ab. "Goes round 'n these woods. He's wilder 'n a deer, an' I've seen 'im jump over logs half as high as this shanty just as easy as ye'd hop a twig. Tries 't' tell 'im once or twice, but tain't no use. He's quicker 'n a will."

"What kind of a lookin' man is he?" Tip Taylor asked.

"Direct, big, broad shouldered feller," said Ab. "Six feet tall if he's an inch. Had a kind of a deer-skin jacket on when I seen 'im an' breeches an' moccasins made o' some kind o' hide. I recall his 'one day I was over on the ridge two mile or more from the Stillwater gold mine. I seen 'im sittin' a drink at the spring there in the burnt timber. An' if I ain't mistaken there was a real live panther playin' round 'im. If I t'waint a panther 'twas jes' as high as I can tell ye. The critter see me first and drew up 's back. Then the man got up quicker 'n a flash. Soon 's he see me 'Jeminy, didn't they move? Never see no human critter run as he did. A big tree had fell 'cross a lot o' brush right 'n his path. I'll be dog-damned if I want higher 'n my head! But he cleared it just as easy as a grasshopper 'd go over a straw. I'd like 't' know where he comes from, got dummed if I wouldn't. He's the comestest queerest animal 'n these woods."

Ab emphasized this wild view of the night man by an animated movement of his fist that held the big hunting knife with which he whittled. Then he cupped his pipe and began cutting more tobacco.

"Some says 'e 's a ghost," said Tip Taylor, splitting his sentence with a yawn as he lay on a buffalo robe in the shanty.

"Shucks an' shoestrings," said Ab. "He looks too nat'ral. Don't believe no ghost over wore whiskers an' long hair like him. They don't bot' 't' reason."

This remark was followed by dead silence. Tip seemed to lack both courage and information with which to prolong the argument.

Gerald had long been asleep, and we were all worn out with uphill traveling and the lack of rest. Uncle Eb went out to look after the horses that were tethered near us. Ab rose, looked up through the tree tops, ventured a guess about the weather and strode off into the darkness.

We were five days in camp, hunting, fishing, fighting flies and picking blueberries. Gerald's cough had not improved at all. It was, if anything, a bit worse than it had been, and the worry that had clouded our holiday. We were not in high spirit when finally we decided to break camp the next afternoon.

The annual encampment of the Kentucky troops began Monday morning at Paducah. The camp was named Vesper in honor of the mayor.

The body of Mrs. Jane Carlisle, wife of former Secretary of State John G.
Carlisle, was buried in a vault in the Babylon rural cemetery, Babylon Long Island, Monday, but will later be removed to Lexington, Ky.

The Owensboro Chautauqua is furnishing an excellent course of lectures and entertainments to the people at Owensboro. The attendance is good this year. Not less than 1000 to 2000 were present on the first day. It closes August 16.

Tuesday, August 22, a delegate convention will meet at Salem to nominate a candidate to make the race for representation from Crittenden and Livington counties. For this place a man should be chosen who is above and opposed to corruption in any party and a man who will represent the best interests of the people. On Thursday the 24th, the delegates chosen in the counties comprising this senatorial district will meet in Marion to nominate a candidate for state senate. For both places, clean, honest men only should be considered and men who will protect the tax interests of the people.
C is for both of these conventions
are made in this issue of THE RECORD.

The yellow fever scourge is a little grave in the south, but southern towns are being quarantined, the federal government has assumed charge and Var-daman, of Mississippi, has called out militia to prevent local disturbances.
Memphis, Cairo and other points on southern routes to the north are quar-antined to prevent the spread of the disease.

We publish this week a letter of appeal to the farmers of this county,
written by one of them, the organization of an institute for protective purposes. No exception is taken by us and we hope there will be none taken by any one else to what "Old Farmer"
has written, for he simply dwells exclusively on one phase of the subject,
one of the objects and one of the benefits to be derived from organization of the farming class.

While the matter of organization for protection is not, perhaps, strictly within the purposes of an institute, still we do not wish to discourage the idea, and if the principles of "organization for protection" be incorporated in the rules and by-laws, it will only add to the manifold uses of an institute.

The primary object of organizing an institute is that of educating the farming class in the later and more improved methods of deriving the greatest benefits with the least expenditure of time and money in cultivating the soil, stock raising, and other pursuits
common to the farming class.

The usefulness of an organization of any kind, for the good of a community,
and for the membership in particular,
grows with the frequency of its meetings, and interest and zeal displayed by its officers and members.

We predict a useful career for the Crittenden county institute, for with the combination of agricultural and mineral wealth, a proper infusion of public interest will insure success to the movement.

An institute for the farmer will furnish the same stimulus to his efforts as the institute for the school and a commercial club for city and county development of commercial interests.

Let the good work go on.

DO OUR READERS APPRE- CIATE IT?

The Crittenden Record, published at Marion, is one of the most creditable papers of the state. It is just entering on the second year of a life that augurs the highest usefulness for the state and the Republican party.
The Record had, in its very first year,
to meet heavy loss by fire, its whole outfit being reduced to ashes. But from the ruins it rose pluckily, and is today as good a week as can be found in the whole commonwealth. The Record has a very important mission - the redemption of the Gibraltar of the Democracy. But it is equal to big feats. We compliment its editors and publishers, Messrs. J. E. Chittenden and C. H. Whitehouse. They are the right sort. - Louisville Herald.

Plain English.

A rite suite little boy, the son of a kernal, with a rough round his neck,
died up the road as quick as a deer.
After a time he stopped at a house and wrung the bottle. His tow hurt him, and he kneeled wrost. He was two tired to raise his face, and face, and a feint mown of pain rose from his lips.

The made who herd the bottle was about to pair a pair, but she through it down and ran with all her mite, for fear her guessed would not weight.
But, when she saw the little won, tiers
stood in her eyes at the site. "Ewe pore deer! Why do you lie hear!"
"Ewe yew deying!" "Know," he said, "I am feint." She lure him in her arms, as he aught, to a room where he might be quiet, gave him bread and meat, held a cent bottle under his nose, untied his choler, rapped him up warmly, gave him a suite drachm from a viol, till at last he went fourth as hail as a young hoarse. Then

All day they played and chattered,
With laughter sweet and low,
But when the sunset beckoned,
They both made haste to go.
"Now fare thee well, we're going,"
They sweetly called to me,
And hand in hand went singing
Back to oblivion's sea.

Alpha to Omega.

BY RUSTIC.

There are interesting periods in the lives of all, of course. We travel by stages, not easy ones for all of us, but to many they are very much alike. In the budding from babyhood to childhood comes the longing for the joys and toys which that stage offers. The shifting of the frock for the more manly appearing costume, the casting aside of the long white slip for the more pretentious gown, the displacing of the of the cradle by the trundle bed, the dawn of boyhood and girlhood. Then you wished to be a man or woman right off didn't you? How the months and the years dragged slowly up to the teens in those olden happy days! You looked with envy on those who overtopped you, who were years and years ahead of you on the road that life lasting, you must tread. After you slipped into the double figure period,
the next wait, the next stage was reached when you looked down with harmless scorn on the youngsters and slapped your breast with manly pride in the conscious consciousness that another multiplication of the figures, another doubling of the years had lifted you out of boyhood's rank and made a man of you. Then you felt your importance and took your place among the players on the world's stage, ready for the part assigned to you. Soon life became a reality, childhood a memory, babyhood a dream. Still you sighed for the coming years. From 10 to 20 was an age, from 20 to 30 seemed a long way, but you got there finally - got there sooner than you expected, too, didn't you? And then you were not in such a rush to reach the hey-
day. But the days rolled into weeks, the weeks into months, the months
into years with surprising swiftness.
The wrinkles came and the white hairs had to be pulled or hidden. How the time flew then. No longer for today to slip into tomorrow any more.
Quite the reverse when you stand on the dividing line, to be sure. Then comes the last stage, the swift-flying period, then the days run away and the years become burdensome. Backward, not so very far, you occasionally drift on the sea of memory and see the beginning. Ahead, not so very far off, you see the end. The you long for the you long for the slow stage of childhood, but you are on the lightning express of age, on a down grade and due on schedule time.

Farmers' Club.

Mr. Editor: I see in your last week's issue a call for the organization of a farmers' club, that on the 11th inst.,
county court day, the state organizer will be on hand to make a speech, and chat every farmer who can possibly be on hand should come out and join the club.

This matter of organizing an institute is something that you will have to do sooner or later, if you expect to get what is justly due for your labor. This is the day of trusts and combines, and if you are not in shape to demand the value of your produce you will be in a bad fix for you may rest assured that the trusts are well organized and will be ready to buy cheaply everything that you raise on your farms.

As the rest of the country seems to be organizing, it is time for our farmers to be up and doing. So come out, overly that can, and let us get up a strong club. Remember the trusts and bankers, merchants and doctors, lawyers and preachers all have their organizations, and why not the farmers? What fools we farmers are to be still so long and let the rest of the world reap the benefits of our labor.
Are you going to continue this kind of a life so long as you live? I hope not.
Any good brother who will deliver his produce according to contract, at a good price, will make a good club member. Any good sister who will put her old feathers in the top of the sack when she takes them to town for sale and demands all that they are worth, will make an ideal member. Who is it that can justly say the farmers should not organize? It is not the merchants, for they are doing business by the help of the farmers, it is not the bankers, for they are furnishing the money to increase the produce of the farmers, which is their living, it can't be the doctor, for their sole existence is the sickness of the farmers, nor can it be the preachers,
for they are one and all alike well supplied at their tables. So you see all that the farmers have to do is to organize and put themselves in shape to say to the rest of the world "Come along,
boys, and assist us, and we will divide honestly and fairly with you." Why, farmers, it would be a break neck affair with the rest of the world to see who would come over first, for their living would depend upon it. Is it possible that you cannot see where you are drifting? Is it not plain that you are left financially unless you organize for your own protection? If you are still in the dark, come to Marion on August 14, county court day, and learn all you can, is the request of an OLD FARMER.

Our motto: It is our desire to please our patrons to the letter. If we don't do that, tell us, but if we do, tell your neighbors and let them try our shop.
METZ & SEIDENBERG.

Farmers' Call Meeting.

To Crittenden County Farmers:

As correspondent from this county to the department of agriculture, labor and statistics for the state of Kentucky, I have been requested by the commissioner to ask that all farmers of this county meet in Marion on next county court day, August 14th, for the purpose of hearing an address from the commissioner or his deputy, and also for the purpose of organizing a Crittenden County Farmers' Institute.

Respectfully,
CHARLES W. FOX.

Bills of Byplay.

A Dutchman describes an accident
that happened to him in this way:
"Once a long while ago, I went out in
to my apple orchard to climb a pear tree to get some peaches to make my wife a plum pud'n with, and when I sat down on the lowermost limb, I fell down from the topmost branch with one foot on both sides of the fence and like to have stove my insides out."

Still More Grail.

Lexington, Ky., July 27 - State
Inspector Henry Hines is in this city working on tax matters and it is said that developments involving one of the most prominent men in the state
may be shortly expected.

Inspector Hines, in a report made to Gov. Beckham on information furnished by Floyd Day, of the Swan Day
Lumber company, sets forth that A. M.
Harrison, resident agent for the State at large, admitted that concern out of $1,200. This money, it is alleged, was paid to Edward Tider, of Lexington, who claimed to be acting as the agent of Harrison.

A Flower Book of Real Flowers.

The Yellowstone Park Flower Book,
published by the Northern Pacific, is a beautiful creation. It contains twelve specimens of real, pressed flowers, in natural colors, from Yellowstone Park,
with botanical names and the places
where found.

The book also has six full page,
fine half-tone illustrations, showing the Park bears, Grand Canyon, geysers, hot-springs, etc., found in the Park, with a brief description of this most wonderful region, 34 by 62 miles in size, in the very depths of the Rockies.

The Flower Book makes a beautiful souvenir. Send A. M. Cleland, General Passenger Agent Northern Pacific Railway, 50c for a copy.

Fiendish Suffering.

CAMP MEETING AT PINEY POSTPONED

Writer of Following Thinks Evil One Must Have Had It Done.

Dear Christian Friends:—
I think you have committed the worst thing for Piney Fork church you ever did. Oh, how bad I do feel when I hear sinners around me lament about not having a camp meeting! Who knows but that some poor sinner may have been saved.
Christian friends, did you ever know of a camp meeting but that some soul was saved? I do not. It is said that one soul saved is worth ten thousand such works as this. Does not that pay for all our trouble? I should think it right to give them a chance to turn from their sins. If you give them the chance, then, you are not responsible for their evil doing.
I fear some of you are looking too much to the evil part and not to the Lord enough who doeth all things right if you will only trust him.
I believe we would have had the best meeting we have ever had, if you had sanctioned the meeting, my christian friends. So many people's feelings are hurt at the way you did for they think you did a great wrong to our church. I believe every body ought to know something about it for I do not think it right to give up so much to the evil one as that is just as good a thing as he wants.
I hear so many say they don't forget us in the pay part and why not remember us in other things as well. Some say it will ruin the church if it runs that way. May God forbid it and help the people to do right and to work right in the church and to pray with the right spirit, then the Lord will help.
I hear some say if there is a camp meeting they will leave the church. Dear friends, I do not know whether to call you a christian or not. I do not think a true hearted christian would leave the church through malice. My friend, look before you leap. Who, do think, would take your place? I fear, the devil would if you leave with an evil motive in your heart. That is not the way the Lord would have you do. Never give up your church that way. Stick to it and pray for it earnestly and after a while it will come out all right.
Too much talking is going on, I fear, and not enough praying. Try the praying part and see if you do not feel better over it.
How bad I do feel when I am asked about the camp meeting at Piney Fork to tell them there will not be any. It grieves me to think we have to give up our annual camp meeting at old Piney Fork where we have had them for almost a hundred years. It is not a shame for the community to give up the evil one in such a way. I say for you to go and do your part and you will have a clear conscience.
How would you feel at the judgment if some poor soul should come to you and say if you had had a meeting at old Piney where so much good was done, I might have been saved, how would you feel?
I feel that we should have some sort of meeting at old Piney Fork—the mother church of so many churches who are doing so much good. I say to water the old plant that the branches may still prosper.
A CHRISTIAN.

Duvall-McConnell.
Miss Lillie Duvall and Mr. Howard McConnell surprised their many friends and acquaintances by eloping to Elizabethtown, Ill., Sunday afternoon where they quietly assumed the ties of matrimonial bliss at 2:30 o'clock.
The bride is the pretty and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Duvall. Mr. Duvall is a prominent business man and is well known. At present he is in Kananan looking after his interest out there. The groom is the popular young Western Union Telegraph operator on the local exchange of the Paducah Communication Co. He is the son of the Rev. R. T. McConnell, pastor of the M. E. church at Tolu Ky. Mr. and Mrs. McConnell are followed by the congratulations of their host of friends and the Hymns sung also in wishing them a long life and much happiness.
Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple returned to the bride's home where they will reside for the present.
Strayed.
On or about the second Tuesday in April, a red heifer and a red steer, no marks, strayed from my farm near Marion. Any information will be appreciated.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON VII, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, AUG. 13.

Text of the Lesson, II Chron. xxxiv, 14-28—Memory Verse, 21—Golden Text, Ps. cxix, 105—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Copyright, 1905, by American Bible Association.)

The money gathered to repair the house of the Lord recalls the method adopted to obtain money in the days of King Jehoshaphat and the priest Jehoiada—a chest beside the altar, with a hole in the lid of it, and it worked splendidly and brought in much money. I doubt not but that a proper appreciation of the altar (the cross of Christ) today would bring an abundance for the Lord's house. I have seen a box with a hole in the lid to receive thank offerings from grateful hearts to help give the gospel to the heathen and thus aid in completing the house—the church—accomplish great things. But I have seen a similar box placed to receive offerings for other purposes accomplish next to nothing. Each of these boxes was in a church, but the altar and the object made all the difference. When the love of Christ constrains there is no lack.

When any one does the best he knows for God, as Josiah was evidently doing, God will find a way to reveal Himself more fully to such a one, and in this case He caused the priest Hilkiah to find the book of the law, which some think was the original book of which we read in Deut. xxxi, 24-26. The priest gave the book to the scribe, who read it and then took it to the king and read it to him, with the result that the king when he heard it rent his clothes in token of his acceptance of and submission to the message and his grief that the law had been so set at naught.

The king at once sends for further light to one who is qualified to explain the law more fully, and Hilkiah, the prophetess, who dwelt in Jerusalem, is consulted (verse 22). Jeremiah had at this time been a prophet about five years (compare verse 8 and Jer. i, 1, 2), and why he was not consulted I do not know unless it happened that he was at his home in Anathoth and Hilkiah was right there in Jerusalem and the matter required immediate light. There were doubtless many men of influence and importance in Jerusalem, but some one has said that a woman knowing God's will is far superior to a man who doesn't.

Josiah had heard the curses of Deut. xxviii, 15-26, xxx, 17, 18, etc., and knew that the wrath of God was hanging over them because of the sins of the nation and now earnestly desired deliverance for himself and his people if such could be obtained. The word of God is very plain concerning every unbeliever that the wrath of God is upon him (John iii, 18, 36; Gal. iii, 10; Jas. ii, 19), but how few seem to believe it or tremble at the word of God as King Josiah did. Yet only with such as tremble at His word does God dwell (Isa. lviii, 17; Lev. i, 2). A good practical word for many today is found in Job xxxv, 18, "Because there is wrath because lest He take thee away with His stroke, then a great ransom cannot deliver thee."

The prophetess has no answer from herself, as many seem now to have, but she has a "Thus saith the Lord God of Israel" (verses 23, 24), the New Testament equivalent of which is "Verily I say unto you." Happy indeed are all who receive such messages meekly and process promptly to give heed to them. God said to Moses concerning Christ, "I will put my words in His mouth, and He shall speak unto them all that I shall command Him" (Isa. xlviii, 18). He said the same thing to Jeremiah concerning Himself in Jer. i, 7-9, and believers now can trust Him to fulfill to them His word to Moses. "Now therefore go and I will be with thy mouth and teach thee what thou shalt say" (Ex. iv, 12), provided that they have His message in them.

The Lord's message as given in the rest of the lesson had no comfort for the persistently rebellious; it never has. But there was much comfort for Josiah and for all who would turn to the Lord with him, and therefore Josiah sought to turn the people to God that they might escape the impending judgments, and many did turn to the Lord with him as we read in verse 31, 32. God's word is always in time to repentance that they may not perish (I Pet. iii, 9), and this is seen in the last awful judgments of the great tribulation, where we read again and again that they repented not (Rev. ix, 20, 21; xvi, 9, 11).

Josiah, in that same year kept the greatest passover that had been kept since the days of Samuel (xxv, 18, 19), but the revival was only temporary. The hearts of the people were away from God, and the time came when even such men as Moses and Samuel or Noah, David and Job could not deliver the nation by their righteousness or their intercession (Jer. xv, 1; Ezek. xiv, 11). Consider in Job xxxviii, 11-20, how God brings in deliverance from the pit and let us be encouraged to persevere by Job vi, 37. Then when we have sinned and persistently done ill, if men will not repent we have delivered our own souls (Isa. xlii, 20).

The manner of Josiah's death (xxv, 24, 25) has in it something very suggestive and searching. It was the will of God that he should die peacefully when his time came, but by his willful ness he fell in battle. See verse 28 and chapter xxxv, 22-24. His disobedience and self will we bring many things upon ourselves which by obedience and denial of self we might have escaped. It is probable that Paul might have saved himself much suffering at Jerusalem if he had been obedient to the heavenly vision at the close of his journey.

Six Sales Already Consummated!

SIX SALES HAVE ALREADY BEEN CONSUMMATED FOR lots in the Conway-Stone subdivision, and for the next few days only, a special bargain of only $700, will be asked for six of the choicest lots in the subdivision.

This offer will be withdrawn before you are aware. Call today and investigate this proposition. In the absence of T. A. Conway, the editor of this paper will be authorized to make you the proposition.

Examine the plot below. Section number 1 and lots numbering 4, section 8, 5 and 6, section 2, have already been sold. The new proposed railroad will touch this division.

These lots are especially suitable for persons desiring to build and own their own homes, besides they represent the most valuable investment in real estate. Whether you want to build or not, our terms will be reasonable and to suit purchaser.

Money In Beef Raising

Wisconsin feeder, writing in the Wisconsin Gazette, says: "There were seven head in the lot of steers which marketed recently in Chicago. They were on full feed four months. I never feed any cattle except what I eat myself, and I want pure bred steers of the best beef strains. The average age of those steers was two and one-half and the average weight 1,304 pounds. My method of raising and feeding is to let the calves run with the cows for four months and teach them the correct way to eat grain before I wean them. I feed them pretty well during the winter and generally have them borned when one year old. I began feeding this lot of cattle when corn in November, and when I fed them on full feed I gave them mixed corn, which I prefer to mixed, because the cattle can chew it better. I gave the corn in the morning and ground corn and cob meal at night, lighted with bran and oil meal. I gave one-half pound of mixed each day and gradually increased it to two pounds per head. "When I put these cattle on full feed they averaged 1,000 pounds, and when marketed they had gained 400 pounds. After full feeding begins the amount of grain supplied is to be governed largely by the capacity of the animal. Enough should be given to satisfy fully the wants of the animal and no more. "If you can get steers so that they would be all of an age it would be well to buy them for feeding, for when you raise them you cannot have them of an even age. "I have been raising and feeding cattle for twenty years and have always bought registered bulls and have made money. I have sold several lots of steers that were better than the one referred to, especially the two shipments preceding this one, which were sent to New York."

TO INCREASE THE STEER.

Stroke of Horses.
The curative measures may be adopted as follows: Feed hay night and morning only, give drinking water before meals and in small sips often when at work, prefer clean soft water to that rendered hard by the presence of lime salts, which tend to derange the stomach, remove harness at noon and allow horses to rest for an hour and a half, then feed again, but not more than one daily feed, avoid cold corn in summer, as it is heating prior to normal cold, which repair waste of blood and promote rheumatism and inflammation, avoid sudden changes of food and do not feed moist green grass or clover, choose stable daily, ventilate perfectly, screen horses and windows, remove manure piles from vicinity of stable, feed fresh food each week, shade horse's head when at work, avoid heavy wet sponge, if possible, do not work three horses abreast, as the middle horse suffers thereby and is the most liable to sunstroke, where such combination cannot be avoided change horses often to afford as much relief as possible. Choose coolest hours for work and change teams often during sultry, night weather when thunder storms are prevalent. A. S. Alexander, Veterinarian, Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment Station.

A Word For the Razorback.
The trouble with the razorback stock is not that they are not healthy—they never have any disease—but that being of the "lean kind" order they never get fat, writes a correspondent of Farm Progress. A hundred pound pig will eat twenty bushels of corn and probably not weigh over 150 at eight months old. But if one will take one of these long, lank sows and breed her to a pure blood boar of any good breed he will get about fifteen pigs at a litter, thirty in a year, that will have the health and vigor of the dam and much of the growing and fattening qualities of the sire. I know about this; I have tried it. I have never had a razorback sow to lose a pig yet, and I have made some half bloods weigh 300 pounds.

Head of the Horse.
In a horse a broad and full forehead and length from eye to ear are good indications of intelligence, says Live Stock Journal. A straight facial line is quite often found with a high degree of intelligence, but a dish faced horse is rarely anything but a nonentity.

Selection of Sows.
It is a good plan to start the young sow to breeding the season before it is desired to dispose of old or undesirable animals. Sows having superior qualifications as breeders or sucklers should not be disposed of until there is a noticeable decline.

Sell the Live Stock.
Be not stingy with the aid. It costs less than a cent a pound and should therefore be placed where at all times it is convenient for the stock to get it.

Public Is Aroused.

The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 546 St. Clair Ave., Columbus, O., writes: "For several months I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked, I could not sleep and my stomach was so weak from useless doctors' drugs that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guaranteed a Haynes & Taylor's drug store, price 50c.

A Touching Story

In the moving from death of the baby girl of two A. Tyler, Cumberland, Md. He writes: "At the age of 11 months our little girl was in declining health with serious throat trouble and two physicians gave her up. We were almost in despair when we resolved to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. The first bottle gave relief after taking four bottles she was cured and is now in perfect health." Never fails to relieve and cure a cough or cold. At Haynes & Taylor's drug store, 50c and $1.00 guaranteed. Trial bottle.

Metz & Sessler's barber shop, now in the Pierce building, up stairs, last door, will soon remove to the new building opposite the post-office building.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climatic conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectation in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so in a good night's rest and the absence of that weakened cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer climate, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c, regular size, 75c. For sale by Woods & Orme. No. 10, alternates.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer the Hundred Dollar for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CONCRETE STONE BUILDING MATERIAL

Is Found by Scientists to Be Both Strong and Durable.

In order to satisfy an inquiring public as to the relative strength of concrete stone blocks, of which the new Rector building is being constructed, the following data is published:

Having had access to the complete report of the Department of Engineering of the Ohio State University, the results of experiments by the Ohio State geologist, a well known authority on the strength of concrete, are published. The results of the experiments are as follows: The concrete stone blocks, of which the Rector building is being constructed, are made of a standard mixture of 1 of cement to 5 of sand, commonly used in the manufacture of concrete blocks, to withstand a pressure of 3,486 pounds per square inch, or the enormous resistance 550,584 pounds (474 tons) on the standard block 19x32 inches in area, deducting the usual 4x12-inch wall openings. Of course the solid block would have a higher crushing strength in proportion to the increased area of material introduced.

In comparison with this we are able to give you the crushing strength of other common building material. We find that the Rector building, large and heavy, stands at the pressure of 3,486 pounds per square inch, the same as the concrete stone blocks, while the strength of the standard brick is only 1,425 pounds per square inch, and the strength of the standard block is only 1,125 pounds per square inch.

Concrete varies in its strength according to its mixture. From 12,000 to 20,000 pounds per square inch, concrete varies according to the degree of vibration, from 1,400 pounds to 9,000 pounds per square inch.

Pressed brick likewise varies from 3,480 pounds to 10,500 pounds per square inch, which, in themselves, do not vary so very much from concrete in their compression tests.
